Cuban Caves Hold Missiles, Exiles Say

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 14 (AP).

The Cuban Society of Speleology in exile said today the Bellamar caves near Matanzas city, 60 miles east of Havana, have been enlarged with compartments that hold nuclear missiles.

Dr. Osvaldo Aguirre, president of the society, said he received information from clandestine sources regarding work done by Russians in the caves, a once famous tourist attraction.

Mr. Aguirre said the north entrance of the caves was enlarged with compartments holding nuclear weapons and leading to sea.
